

You Caught the Phish!

Great detective work — you spotted the scam!

Click to copy

```
LIC{d0nt_cl1ck_susp1cious_l1nks}
```

What You Learned

Phishing websites try to trick you into giving away personal information by impersonating legitimate sites. Here are the red flags that were hidden on the fake Sakura Travel site:

Misspelled domain name — The URL showed "sakura-travvel.com" with a double 'v'. Real companies don't misspell their own domain names. Always check the URL carefully!

Urgency and pressure tactics — "Verify within 24 hours or your booking will be cancelled" with a countdown timer. Scammers create false urgency so you act before thinking.

Generic greeting — "Dear Valued Customer" instead of your actual name. Legitimate booking confirmations use your real name because they know who you are.

Asking for bank details — A real travel site would never ask you to re-enter your full bank account and card details on a booking confirmation page.

Identity document request — The popup asking you to upload your passport or ID is a classic social engineering tactic to steal your identity documents.

← Back to the challenge